

Complying with the SSHRC, NSERC, and CHIR Open Access Mandates

As of May 1st, 2015, peer reviewed journal publications arising out of all Tri-Agency supported research must be freely accessible within 12 months of publication. The policy also applies to grants awarded by CHIR from 2008 onward.

How to comply with the policy

An article is considered “freely accessible” if it is:

1. Deposited in an institutional repository, such as Scholarship@Western, or a disciplinary repository, such as arXiv. Western Libraries is pleased to assist with mediated deposit of your articles into Scholarship@Western at no cost to you. Please contact scholarship@uwo.ca for information and assistance.

Note: Academic sharing sites such as Academia.edu do not meet the standard as laid out in the Tri-Agency open access policy.

2. Published in an open access journal, provided that open access is guaranteed within one year of publication. The Directory of Open Access Journals is an excellent resource for finding quality open access journals.

Note: Publishing in this manner may incur an additional article processing fee (APF) or open access fee. These costs must be paid by you, however are eligible expenses under the use of grant funds policies of the Tri-Agencies.

Western  Libraries

Western Libraries is happy to provide you with information and assistance to help you to comply with the Tri-Agency mandates. Please contact scholarship@uwo.ca for specialized assistance, including journal selection, repository selection, and mediated deposit.